(Continued from page 1) n it; and that, of course, he and his tribe would have to run with the stream, (as he expressed it On this Captain Arbuckle thought proper to detain him, the Red hawk, and another fellow, as hostages, to prevent the nation from joining the British.

In the course of that summer our government had ordered an army to be raised, of volunteers, to serve under the command of General Hand; who was to have collected a number of troops at Fort Pitt, with them to descend the river to Peint Pleasant, there to meet's reinforcement of volunteers expected to be raised in Augusta and Botetourt counties, week. and then proceed to the Shawance towns and chastize them so as to compel them to a neutrality. Rand did not succed in the collection of troops at Fort Pitt; and but three or four companies were raised in Augusta and Betetourt, which were under the command of Colanel George Skillern, who ordered me to use my endeavors to rise all the volunteers I could get in Greenbrier, for that ser vice. The people had begun to see the difficulties attendant on state of war and long compaigns carried through wilderness, and but a few were willing to engage in such service. But as the settlements which we covered, though less exposed to the depredations of the Indians, had showed their willingness to aid in the proposed plan to chastize the Indians, and had raised three companies, was very desirious of doing all I could to promote the business and will offer for sale on or before the most endeavors and proposed to personal property of the said Geo the milits officers to volunteer raelves, which would be an encouragement to others, and by date and the 16th day of Decem such means to raise all the men who could be got. The chief of article which will bring the ap the officers in Greenbrier agreed praised price, and on the 16th day to the proposal, and we cast lots

They seem powerless to grasp the situa tion so as to rain the country in order to discredit the poor blupderers who have rocked the ship of state. They are rot content to call attantion to the fullfillment of their forceasts, but with coats off, do their utagest to restore confidence. Our would think they had a greens merest in the well fare of the country. Here we are safely . ver the worst panic it our history, and not a single attempt nothing on a few years ago. The Pocahontas County Musical Association-will meet at Buckeye on the evening of December 12 and continue two days. As the members appear to have lost all interest, the president requests all interested in the welfare of the Association to be present, as the future of the Association depends on the interest of this session, Singers and choirs from other neighborhoods are invited by the people of Buckeye and will be entertained during the Association. Let all come and help to make this one of the best sessions of the Association.

Not a Man of Frivolity. Dry Dougal of Keith, who was made in hotorary member of the Aberdeen society in 1795, had a reputation for bluntness. A talkative woman wen to him one day and said to him. "Doctor, what is the matter with iny tongue?" "Just needin a res', he replied, shortly. On another day a patient went to him and complained "I have a deal to suffer with my eyes, decter," whereupon he answered "Better suffer with them than with

Value of Good Intentions I don't believe very much in good esolutions; for my experience is that the people who make plenty of them are not always as good at carrying them out. You see it takes so much out of one to make a really fine reso lution. A solld ounce of good trying is worth more than a whole pound o ood intentions.—Woman's Life,
